The GRID is an interactive quiz game, covering cancer related topics. The format of the game is similar to a popular TV quiz show, where the clues are phrased as an answer and the response is phrased in the form of a question.

For Example:
Clue: This website won the 2007 "Cancer on the Internet" award.
Response: What is CancerQuest?

How to play:

For one person:

- Enter your name and begin the game.
- Choose a category and a point value, the clue will open.
- To check your response, click and hold the "Ans" button.
- If your response was correct click the "Check", the point value will be added to your total.
- If your response was incorrect click the "X", the point value will be subtracted from your total (you lose points for incorrect responses).

For two or more:

- Enter player’s names and begin the game (click the "make active" box to add players).
- Choose a category and a point value, the clue will open.
- Each player uses a different keyboard key to "ring in"
  - Player 1 - use "z" key
  - Player 2 - use "." (period) key
  - Player 3 - use "enter" key on far right of keyboard
- To check response click and hold the "Ans" button.
- If a correct response is given, click the “Check”. The point value will be added to the responding player’s total.
- If an incorrect response is given, click the "X". The point value will be subtracted from responding player’s total (an incorrect response results in a loss of points).
- The player with the correct response chooses the next clue.
- Continue until all clues are uncovered, the player with the most points wins the game.
